Another fool, this time a man, committed suicide by throwing himself in front of August Belmont's Kentucky horse on the race track at Ascot, England, preventing him from winning.

The law and order element of Henderson county farmers have organized a vigilance committee, calling themselves Regulators, to put down night riding. Their appeals for state protection have been disregarded and they have adopted this course.

An additional exemption of $500 for each child of a family, in the income tax section of the tariff bill, was determined upon by the senate finance subcommittee of which Senator Williams is chairman, and a change will be recommended to the majority members of the committee. The subcommittee is also considering a recommendation changing the $4,000 exemption to $3,000.

Fourteen American soldiers were killed in the recent four-days fighting on Jolo Island, the Philippines, when General Pershing's command finally subdued and disarmed the rebellious Moros, according to a report to the war department. On the dead list were Capt. Taylor A. Nichols of the Philippine Scouts, eleven scouts and two privates of the regular army. Captain Nichols was 37 years old and the son of John Nichols, of Durham, Cal.

NINETY PAIRS

Of Ladies Silk Hose Found On River Bank.

Three or four white fishermen accidentally stumbled up on a pretty big find on the river bank below the I. C. pumping station last Thursday afternoon. While climbing down the bank to the water's edge they saw a closed box hidden in a pile of driftwood and proceeded to break it open. Inside the box were ninety pairs of ladies silk hose. This find caused them to look around for something else but their quest was without results.

Believing that the hosiery was hidden there by Wiley Ellis, the negro now in jail charged with breaking open a freight car, they carried the hosiery to the I. C. depot and turned it over to the agent, Thos. L. Morrow.

"THE RESURRECTION."

Another High Class Play at the Rex Next Week.

Manager Shrode has secured for the Rex Theatre another of the most popular picture plays of the day, and on next Wednesday will present Tolstoi's "Resurrection." This play ranks with Saman, Cleopatra and others of the most popular presentations that have been seen at the Rex. There will be no advance in prices. Tell your neighbor about it and go and see one of the best of four reel plays that has been here.

A handsome $300.00 piano—and that's not all—a beautiful mahogany bed room suit and a wilton velvet room-size rug. These are the unusual premiums we will give away in just a few more days. WALLER & TRICE.

W. T. TANDY CASE ON

Damage Suit Growing Out Of The Night Rider Raid in 1907.

TAKE REST OF THE WEEK

Witnesses Of The Defense Were Being Heard Yesterday.

The case of W. T. Tandy against the City of Hopkinsville for $10,000 was called Thursday morning and entered into.

The jury was impaneled as follows: J. L. White, R. L. Vaughan, J. F. Russell, J. B. Haddock, J. E. Payne, James Gamble, W. L. Buie, Jas. Mitchell, T. O. Marquess, Peyton Rogers, Walter Yancey and U. G. Goode.

Mr. Tandy is represented by Breathitt & Breathitt and Trimble & Bell, and the city is represented by John C. Duffy, C. H. Bush and W. H. Southall, City Attorney.

The plaintiff sues to recover the loss sustained by him in the night rider raid of Dec. 6-7, 1907, when a warehouse owned by him and occupied by the Tandy & Fairleigh Co. was burned. The suit is brought under an act that holds a city responsible for losses sustained in riots when property owners have notified the municipality that they are about to have their property destroyed and have exhausted their own power to protect it and failed to do so. In such cases, the city refusing to afford protection is responsible for losses sustained.

Mr. Tandy was the first witness. He relied upon rumors of danger that had been current for a year or more, as notice to the city authority that his property was about to be destroyed. He admitted that he had given no notice himself and had not asked for protection or in any way attempted to protect his own property.

Mr. Tandy was on the stand probably two hours and was followed by many witnesses whose testimony was intended to show the unsettled conditions in the county surrounding Hopkinsville in 1907 and to fix the value of the property destroyed.

On yesterday morning a deposition of Edwin Hodge, of Henderson was read giving correspondence he had with Chas. M. Meacham, Mayor, Nov. 21, 1907, asking protection from a mob feared on or before Nov. 27, 1907. Under date of Nov. 28, 1907, he expressed satisfaction that the trouble had failed to occur.

The jury was sent out and the defendant moved to dismiss the suit on peremptory instructions as the plaintiff had not shown that he had given any notice of expected danger and the only notice given had proved to be an idle rumor. The court said he would hear both sides and the jury was called back.

Mayor Chas. M. Meacham was placed on the stand at 10 o'clock and his examination was not concluded until 4:30 o'clock.

Chief of Police Ellis Roper told of the disposition of the police the night of Dec. 6, four all night and two who went off at midnight. Went home about midnight, no trouble apparent. Roused by the fire about 2 a. m. and came down town and heard mob leaving when I got to 12th street. Found the police office shot up and from there went to the L. & N. depot where the firemen were fighting the fire, but unable to put it out.

Joe Claxton was policeman that night and told of the attack on the police office. Looked like 50 or 100 men armed and shooting. I had a 32 pistol. Started out back way and met squad of 12, who ordered me back. Had just returned from a patrol, saw nothing wrong. Fifty policemen could not have defended the town from the mob all over town.

HEAVY STORM EAST OF CITY

Wind, Rain and Hail Played Havoc Last Thursday.

PROPERTY DAMAGE GREAT.

Trees Uprooted, Barns Blown Down, River Out of Banks.

A heavy storm struck the neighborhood of Dave Ralston, about five miles North-East of the city, last Thursday about 4 o'clock. The wind partook of the nature of a cyclone and blew with terrific force. It was followed by a cloud burst of rain and hail, the hailstones being nearly the size of partridge eggs. The rain poured down in torrents for nearly an hour and a half. In twenty minutes the river was out of its banks and in a very short time the low places were turned into small lakes.

The roof of a tenant house belonging to Sam Lacey was blown off.

A large tree in Dave Ralston's yard was blown down and the door of a stable was wrenched from the hinges.

A barn on the premises of Mrs. Robert E. Kin was blown down.

Sam Morris' barn was blown down. Wheat in some sections was blown flat to the ground.

The hail continued to fall for some time and the growing corn in many places was stripped, leaving the stalks looking like small sticks stuck in the ground.

The intensity of the storm forced all people working in the fields to seek shelter and the thunder and lightning, which lasted for some time, frightened women and children nearly out of their wits.

The uncut wheat will straighten up some before being harvested and that already cut and shocked will not be damaged, but the loss entailed by buildings being blown down and fencing torn to pieces will be pretty heavy in the aggregate.

The examination of defense witnesses was still in progress at the hour of adjournment. The case will occupy the rest of the week.

Witnesses in all other civil cases have been dismissed for this term and jurors until next week.

SLICK THIEF IS CAUGHT

Special Agent From Nashville Took Position In a Tree.

7 OR 8 MONTHS STEALING

Large Lot of Merchandise Found Stored in Negro's Home.

Wiley Ellis, a negro, was arrested Thursday morning about 5 o'clock by R. A. Gotto, of Nashville, and placed in the lockup at police headquarters, charged with breaking into a freight car of the T. C. Railroad and breaking open a box containing merchandise. Mr. Gotto is a special agent or detective, of the railroad company and he said that the arrest of Ellis is the solution of many robberies that have been committed during the past seven or eight months at Hopkinsville. Persistent work on the part of the road detectives was of no avail. Time and time again the agent of the company has sent into the main office reports that a certain car had been broken into and goods stolen.

When Mr. Gotto was put to work he came here and kept close watch on everything, knowing that he would have to proceed very cautiously if he succeeded in trapping the thief or thieves. So Thursday night he went down to the T. C. track some distance from the station and climbed a tree. Along towards 5 o'clock a. m. he saw the negro come slowly down the track, glancing suspiciously around in every direction, finally passing between some cars and disappearing from view. Mr. Gotto was certain that he had at last found the man that had been looked for so long, and from his perch up in the tree watched for the reappearance of the negro. His patience was soon rewarded. Ellis appeared on the North side of the car beyond the tank and, after standing at the door for awhile and glancing furtively about him, broke the seal on the car door and crawled in. After the negro got in the car Mr. Gotto hastily came down from the tree and reached a point where he could see what was going on inside the car. He says he saw Ellis breaking open a box with a hatchet when he changed his position to within about fifteen feet of the car door. Drawing his gun and covering the surprised negro, he called to him to come out of the car.

The negro assumed a nonchalant air and coolly ask Mr. Gotto why he wanted him to come out. The detective did not waste any time or words with Ellis, but impressed upon him the importance of complying with his order. The negro, realizing that everything was up for him, got to the ground and Mr. Gotto took him to police headquarters and locked him up.

Officers Mitchell and Lieut. Hawkins, who knew where Ellis lived, got in a buggy and, accompanied by the detective, went to the negro's house and searched it for the stolen goods. What they found was a "plenty," and more. They loaded the buggy with several suits of clothes, odd pantaloons, four or five pairs of shoes, hats, about a dozen pairs of ladies' hose, socks, dress goods, three or four pounds of chewing tobacco—in fact almost everything that could be thought of.

The car was loaded at Nashville and billed through to Princeton. The goods secured were not taken from the car Thursday morning, but Mr. Gotto says they captured an accumulation of stuff that Ellis had been appropriating at different times during the past seven or eight months from cars broken into in Hopkinsville. Ellis will remain in jail to await the action by the September grand jury.

TO SUPPRESS NIGHT RIDING

Armed Volunteers Sent Into Western Kentucky Tobacco Patches.

KU-KLUX-KLAN MEMBER.

He Is the Leader of Vigilance Committee Organized at Henderson.

Henderson, Ky., June 18.—Volunteers were armed and sent to the tobacco patches of Western Kentucky today to halt night riding after the organization of a vigilance committee, which numbers nearly 400 members, here. The committee's leader is a man who is said to have been one of the Ku-klux Klan of postbellum days. The armed volunteers will attempt to check interference with tobacco planting. Organization of the committee resulted from frequent recent clashes between warring tobacco interests—those who do and those who do not seek to restrict the tobacco acreage.

Editors of The Journal which has vigorously objected to methods of the night riders were issued today under armed guard, after a plot to wreck the newspaper's plant had been frustrated.

MAKING DICTIONARY

Work Has Lasted More Than Thirty Years.

Sir James Murray Tells of Scope of Undertaking, and Difficulties of Compiling Oxford Lexicon—
Be Finished in 1917.

In an old English garden at Oxford, away from the hurry and strife of affairs, the wonderful architecture of the new English dictionary silently approaches completion, says the London Post. More than thirty years has this treasure house of the language been in building.

Many of the first enthusiasts have passed away, Dr. Furnivall and Professor Skeat among them, but the master builder, Sir James Murray, abides still at the task, his natural strength unabated, it would seem, notwithstanding his seventy-six years.
Summer and winter he rises at six o'clock in the morning and works at the dictionary the day through.

In the preparation of the first section of volume X (T-Tombac), which has just been published, Sir James worked ninety hours a week for three months. The history of "to" with the negative alone cost two months of toil.

Asked as to the probable date of completion of the dictionary, Sir James had an answer which gave him obvious pleasure.

"I have got to the stage when I can estimate the end," he said. "In all probability the dictionary will be finished on my eightieth birthday, four years from now. My colleagues, Dr.
Bradley and Dr. Craigie, are busy with 'S,' and I have penetrated into the second half of 'T,' which I expect to complete in two years. By that time the three of us will be at liberty for the last six letters of the alphabet.

"At first we calculated that the dictionary would run into eight volumes.
That calculation was made on the basis of existing dictionaries, Johnson's and, in particular, Webster's; but we were not long in finding that there had been a tendency, either from the pressure of the publisher or a natural weariness to hurry the work in its latter parts. Ten volumes came even to be narrow limits for the way in which we planned to treat every word, small and great."

Asked about special difficulties and problems which have arisen in the course of his labors, Sir James had much to say. He referred to that elusive class of words whose parentage cannot be traced; they defy the telescope of the lexicographer.

"Whenever we write down 'etymol-ogy unknown' it means that days and weeks of study have been spent without other result. Every conjecture made as to the possible origin has been carefully tested and abandoned before we write that final epithet of failure."

Sir James' spirit of devotion to the building of the dictionary impresses every visitor to his garden at Oxford.
While he impatiently suffers the mere interrupter, Sir James pays a warm tribute to correspondents in Britain and in many parts of the world who are helping on the work. He made special reference to the librarians of the library of congress at Washington and of the Boston Athenaeum for turning up and copying passages from American books not in English public libraries. There are a hundred others to whom, he said, the thanks of himself and his colleagues were due. To all these the completion of the Oxford dictionary will be a great festival, memorable in the annals of literature.

Where the Best Man Falls.

Evidently a school of training is needed for groomsmen. A parish clerk, who has been officiating for thirty-seven years at a London West End church, famous the world over for its numerous society weddings, declares that groomsmen are rather noted for absentmindedness. In particular, the man in that position, fails to look after the bridegroom's hat, and left to himself, nearly always lets the bridegroom go away hatless.

"Why," continued the old clerk,
"when Mr. Asquith was married—four prime ministers signed the register; Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Balfour, Lord Rosebery, and the bridegroom himself—his hat was left behind in the vestry, and his best man was no less important a person than Lord Hat-dane, the present lord chancellor, whom you would have thought was to be relied on, and the worst of it was Mr. Asquith wears a very large-sized hat, very difficult to replace. Lord Kitchener I have seen as best man once. But if I had not kept vigilant watch, the bridegroom would have gone away bareheaded."

Utilizing the Waste.

In the city of Brussels, the school children were asked by their teachers to gather up as they came and went from school such apparently valueless objects as old metal bottles, capsules, tin cans, tinfoil, paint tubes, refuse metal and deliver the same into the keeping of their teachers. Within eight months they collected: 1,925 pounds of tinfoil, bottle capsules, 4,415 pounds, 220 pounds of old paint tubes, 1,221 pounds scraps of metal, total 7-781 pounds. This heap of rubbish was sold and its proceeds applied so as to completely clothe 600 poor children and send 96 to recuperative colonies and there still remained quite a balance.

Stop letting things go to waste and thus administer to your independence in later years.

J. B. WEBB CLAIMS KINSHIP TO TEN THOUSAND

A genealogical record, going back to 1350, proves that J. B. Webb, of Lombard, Ill., is entitled to membership in the Mayflower and Colonial societies as well as the Sons of the Revolution. His antecedents took part in every war the United States ever fought.
Webb has been among the residents of the country ever since it has been a good place in which to live.
Webb was among those who made up the original colonies, and Webb were among the first to take up arms when America decided to become a republic.

Probably the most interesting branch of the Webb family was that which left the Old Dominion and took up their residence in Kentucky. The original Webbs of Kentucky increased rapidly and their progeny now inhabit every county in that famous state.

With hardly an exception every resident of Lecher, a little county in eastern Kentucky, is related, directly or indirectly, to the Webb family, which makes that family without doubt the most remarkable one in the United States. There are six surviving children of Benjamin Webb, the original settler, and their immediate descendants are legion. They are as follows: Aunt Letty, aged eighty, who has eighty grandchildren, fifty great-grandchildren and an even dozen great-great-grandchildren.

Aunt Polly, eighty-two years of age, who has eight living children, seventy grandchildren and almost half as many great-great-grandchildren.

Jason, who is but seventy-eight years of age, is proud of the fact that his descendants outnumber those of any of his brothers or sisters. In the same house where he lives—built more than sixty years ago—he began housekeeping, and there were nineteen children born to him. Sixteen of them are still living. He has 150 grandchildren, eighty great-grandchildren and sixty great-great-grandchildren, all of whom live within ten miles of the old gentleman.

Uncle Miles has seen the snows of seventy-five winters, but is still able to ride over the mountains to visit his best girl—his sister-in-law, by the way.

Aunt Sally, though seventy-three years old, is known as a worker. Her husband, aged 78, is still living. They have thirteen children, eighty grandchildren, sixty great-grandchildren and twenty-eight great-great-grandchildren.

Uncle Wiley is the boy of the family. He is seventy-one and has been a widower for seven years. He has eleven children, sixty-five grandchildren, thirty great-grandchildren.

Within the vicinity where these old people live there are about 800 of their descendants, and of the 12,000 population of the county it is said the degree of consanguinity can be traced enough to prove them all relatives of each other.

"LIKE BIRD TALK"

English Sounds That Way to Miss Li-Bi-Cu.

Chinese Woman Physician Speaks It Fluently Herself Now, but the First Impression Remains—Superstition in Healing Art.

Do you know what your English language sounds like to me?" asked Miss Li-Bi-Cu, a Chinese physician who is in America to take a post-graduate course at Johns Hopkins university.
"It sounds like bird talk."

"The missionaries used to laugh at me when I told them that, but it is literally true; and even after I learned the language and have been speaking it for years English still reminds me of the mysterious and musical chirping and chattering of the birds. The first time I heard missionaries talking their language I asked, 'Do they talk the birds' language?' And when I told them, 'Now you know what the birds say,' they thought it a great joke. I think English is beautiful, though difficult to learn; but no matter how much of it I know I cannot get away from my first impression."

Miss Li took up the study of English when she was sixteen years old and spent four years studying the language and the branches allied with it and necessary to a liberal education before she took up the study of medicine at the Women's Medical college in Philadelphia. She spent four more years in the medical school, and in 1905, at the age of twenty-four, went back to China to begin her work of healing the sick.
She expects to return to China in April, after a year of post-graduate study in Baltimore.

Dr. Li came to New York to address missionary gatherings in the interest of a medical college in Peking with which she has been connected. She says this college is one of the most promising agencies of progress in China today, because through it Chinese young men and women may be trained in modern medicine without undergoing a long preliminary training in English.

"There is enormous need for trained physicians in China," said Dr. Li.
"We have today one western trained physician to 1,500,000 population. If you had that proportion in the United States it would mean that you had in this entire nation just 88 doctors.
In China, with its population enormously greater than ours, and with its multitude of medicine men whose cure is worse than the disease, the problem is enormously complicated.

"The reigning emperor about 3,000 years ago evinced great interest in medical healing. He personally spent much time experimenting with herbs, classifying them according to their supposed cures. All of these herbs were listed in a book which the emperor compiled, but he never organized a school, and while the knowledge he had gained by his experiments may have been valuable and really efficient for healing, the lack of a school to train the coming generation lost much of what the emperor had gained. But he did leave his book with the list of curative herbs.
If anyone wanted to become a doctor, all he did was to read through the book of Herbs and announce himself a qualified medical healer.

"The worst kind of abuses grew out of this. The disease was not as bad as the cure in many cases. The medicine men treated with tiger skins, snake skins and leopard skins as well as with herbs. They had a great many superstitions about appeasing the spirits.

"I remember the case of a young boy who had convulsions as a result, apparently, or indigestion. The medicine man who was called in took a needle, threaded it, pushed it into the boy's stomach as far as it could go, left it there for three hours, and then pulled it out by the thread. There the evil spirit was made to escape, as he believed.

"Another person had a severe cold, perhaps it was the grip. The medicine man stuck needles into the nape of the patient in order that the cold might escape. Little babies two and three years old were treated by pricking their gums with needles. Sometimes these raw places on the infants' gums were rubbed with rock salt. The treatment for a baby who cries too much is to burn the soft spot at the front of the head. Hot needles are sometimes used. Of course this treatment is dangerous, often fatal.

Prepared for the Worst.

When Sam Jackson, now publisher of the Oregon Journal, was editor of the East Oregonian of Pendleton he went down to Portland one day and met a cousin from Virginia, named Norman. He invited Norman to go up to Pendleton with him for a visit.
Norman consented. So Sam wired to Mrs. Jackson:

"Coming on the early morning train
—Norman with me."

They got to Pendleton about three
a. m. and went up to the Jackson house. The house was lighted. Jackson was surprised to find Mrs. Jackson waiting for him, and was further surprised to observe a rather stern expression on her face.

She met him at the door. "Where's that woman?" she asked aidly.

"What woman?" spluttered Jackson.
"This woman you refer to in this message," said Mrs. Jackson handing her astonished husband the telegram he had sent.

It read: "Coming in the morning—woman with me!"—Exchange.

DIAMOND STICK PIN

It Held a Pink Carnation Which Fulfilled Its Purpose in Life.

By M. DIBBELL.

(Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Tears welled up in Doris Mortimer's eyes blinding her so that she stumbled on the last long step down from the car and would have gone headlong had not a man who stood waiting to come aboard made a quick step forward and received her in his arms.

"I beg your pardon," he said as he released her. "But it seemed the only way to keep you from a bad fall."

"Thank you, for it was all my fault—I hope I did not hurt you?" The shock had restored Doris' self control and she tried to smile as she asked the question.

"No indeed; I am very glad I was on the spot when needed," and touching his hat, her rescuer swung aboard the already moving train.

He dropped into the first vacant seat on the station side of the car to look back at Doris hurrying down the platform. "I never saw a sweeter looking girl, but the poor little soul seemed to be in trouble," was his mental comment.

As he settled back in the seat, loosening his overcoat, something fell to the floor with a soft tinkle. He stooped in surprise to pick up a pink carnation, caught on the stem of which was a gold stick pin. The pin was an exact imitation of a four leaved clover and tiny diamonds in the two upper leaves formed the initials "D. M."

"Great Jehoshaphat! Have I taken to robbing people unconsciously!" was Stephen Lorimer's first thought—then suddenly he remembered that the pretty girl he had saved from a fall was wearing a pink flower. "Oh horrors—she will think that was why I caught her, to relieve her of this!"

Doris had not noticed the loss of either pin or flower, but was hastening to her afflicted brother. Six months before, he had come to the small town of Brantford to become assistant surveyor in a firm which had chosen him from their numerous applicants. He was getting on well until one unlucky day there came a farmer from an outlying farm with the request that some capable man be sent back with him at once to survey certain fields over which he and a neighbor had come to disagreement.

The work fell to David Mortimer, and he made a successful job of it—for his survey was accepted as satisfactory by all concerned, a friend of both farmers acting as David's assistant. Late in the afternoon as the farmer was driving the surveyor back to Brantford behind a team of young and spirited horses, a runaway resulted from the sudden bounding out of a big dog from behind a wall. Both the farmer and David were thrown out, but in some marvelous way the farmer escaped injury, while poor David who was flung onto a sharp rock at the roadside received a broken leg and a severe scalp wound.

The farmer's first thought after picking himself up was for his horses. He ran after them and found them at a standstill not many rods away. They had swerved into the dense undergrowth which came to the very edge of the road, and were unable to proceed. The light wagon which had tipped over on its side behind them acted as a sort of anchor. It took several minutes to extricate them, but to his delight their owner found that they had not been hurt. When he had righted the wagon and got his team once more within the traces, the farmer suddenly thought of his companion in misfortune and hurriedly drove back to find him. David lay unconscious from the wound on his head, but the farmer managed to lift him into the wagon and drove as speedily as possible to a Brantford doctor. It was in the doctor's spare bedroom that the young man regained consciousness.

The scalp wound made him feverish; and after a day or two it was thought best to send word of his accident to the Mortimers. Thus Doris came at once to nurse her big brother. It was the thought of him which had brought the tears which caused her own tumble.

Dr. Rogers' house was a short distance from the station and Doris was shown at once to David's room.

"Doris! How good it is to see you—I didn't know they had sent word about my smash up."

Doris kissed him wherever she could find a place below the bandage. "You look as though you had been on a regular orgie—I never expected to see my immaculate brother making such a disreputable appearance. But as little Alice said when her brother had chicken pox 'I love you just the same, even if you are ugly.'"

David laughed for the first time since his disaster. "Always something cheerful even for the battered—you are a dear girl Doris," and he squeezed her hand.

"Father and mother sent you a carload of love, and mother says that if she hears another word about feverishness she will drop everything and come to take care of you herself. Here is a little message she wrote you." Doris produced a note.

"Oh! Where is the lovely carnation that Mona pinned on my coat so I should be sure to remember to give it to you!" Doris spoke in sudden panic, as she realized that the flower had vanished. "And my dear little pin that sure shall find it again."

"I hope you will find your pin, girls, for I know how you value it. And did Mona really send me a flower?" There was ill concealed delight in this question, and Doris answered teasingly:

"You dear old goose; don't you suppose I know what that means to you? Yes she surely sent you one of her big pink carnations, and wanted me to tell you it bore her sympathy and the hope that you would soon be all right."

"I see that my wise sister can't be deceived. So I may as well own up that I feel the loss of that flower quite as much as you your pin."

Doris gave him a loving pat, and informed him that all conversation must cease for the present.

David had no return of fever after his sister's arrival, and Dr. Rogers considered him one of the most cheerful and tractable patients he had ever attended.

Doris smiled mischievously when the doctor gave her this opinion; and later said to David, after repeating the compliment, "Dr. Rogers doesn't know how helpful an effect just a little pink flower which never even materialized has had on my suffering brother."

Stephen Lorimer's business trip which occupied a week, seemed endless to him; for the little gold pin had become a real discomfort—his chief desire was to get back to Brantford and try to find its rightful owner. But even when the return to town was accomplished he seemed no nearer to a return of the pin.

Stephen spent all his spare time for several days in wandering about with the hope that he might encounter the young woman of the train incident; but as Doris remained continuously with David his quest was fruitless.

One morning he stopped to see the younger member of the firm which employed David Mortimer; it was only a friendly call and in a very short time McArling said, "I am sure you will forgive me if I seem not quite civil, for we are rushed to death since our best surveyor's accident. The poor chap broke his leg and everybody seems to choose this as the time to have extra work done—I haven't a spare minute."

"That's all right—don't you let me hinder you a particle," Stephen never knew what prompted him to ask as he rose, "Has your surveyor anybody to look after him, or did he have to go to the hospital?"

"He was boarding, but Dr. Rogers took him in after the accident, and his sister came on ten days ago to nurse him. He has picked up wonderfully since she arrived—I don't wonder, such a pretty girl as that ought to cure anything."

Stephen had suddenly become all attention. "When did you say she came? And how does she look?" he inquired eagerly.

The busy man laughed. "Firstly, Miss Mortimer got here a week ago last Thursday; secondly she has the finest pair of brown eyes and the waviest golden brown hair that any girl need wish for—who is in a rush now?" for Stephen started toward the door at top speed.

"Have just remembered an important engagement—will see you again soon," called back Stephen as he vanished.

All Brantford knew Dr. Rogers and Stephen made a bee line for his residence. He asked the trim maid if Miss Mortimer was within, and she answered yes. Then she was requested to tell Doris that someone whose name she would not recognize, desired to speak with her on an important matter.

Doris came down. She recognized Stephen and gave a cry of delight as she saw what he was holding out as he advanced to meet her.

"I did not want you to think me a pickpocket, Miss Mortimer. I have tried my hardest to return this to you—and you cannot imagine what a load it lifts from my conscience to do it."

"Thank you so much. I have mourned over the loss of Daddy's pin—though of course I did not let David see. I suppose you haven't the carnation too?" The question was asked eagerly, for Doris remembered what David had said about its loss.

To her dismay Stephen Lorimer blushed up to his hair. "Yes—yes," he stammered. "I have it with me—did you want it?"

"Only for David—" hastily explained Doris. "A dear friend sent it to him, so it was not really mine to lose."

"Then I return it willingly," Stephen drew a leather case from the breast pocket of his coat, and took from it a withered pink carnation. Doris tried to look very matter-of-fact as she took it, and succeeded only in blushing divinely.

"My friend McArling told me of your brother's misfortune—don't you think I might cheer him up a little if I came to see him now and then, Miss Mortimer?"

This proved a master stroke, for to make time pass pleasantly for David was Doris' only thought. The pink carnation had fulfilled its purpose in life, and two weddings which occurred within the ensuing year could be directly charged to its account.

Measuring California Streams.

Throughout California field work has been carried on by the federal survey at nearly 200 points in the measurements of the principal streams. These records of the behavior of rivers throughout the year, and year after year, are of the utmost importance in the consideration of all projects relating to the development of water supply for irrigation, power, etc. The report is available to the public.

The Love Letters of a Confederate General

WE begin in the November issue a series of real love-letters written over fifty years ago, by one of our national heroes to his sweetheart during the period of '61 to '65. This great general will go down to posterity as having accomplished one of the most brilliant feats of arms in the history of the world. He was as great a lover as he was a general, therefore these letters combine authentic history and exquisite romance. They sound a human note that no other work of literature has done in a decade; it is war, it is romance, it is history, it is literature. You simply can't afford to miss this wonderful series—an inside story of the Civil War now published for the first time and containing all the freshness of a contemporary happening. These letters will grip you hard, and hold your interest from first to last. Fill out the coupon and send it now before you forget it.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear.
There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies.
Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Died In Hospital.

John B. Hutchings, aged sixty-four years, died after a lingering illness at the Western Kentucky Hospital and was buried with Pythian honors. He was born near Olmstead, in Logan county, moving to Elkton twenty years ago. His wife, a daughter, Miss Minnie Hutchings, of Hopkinsville, and two sons,
Charles P. Hutchings, of Amarillo, Tex., and George H. Hutchings, of Plainview, Tex., survive him. Besides these he leaves three sisters, Mrs. J. W. Robertson, of Allensville; Mrs. T. J. Bailey, of Olmstead, and Mrs. J. B. Boyer, of Wilsonville, Ala.

Wild Run.

Raymond West, aged about 17, a son of Dr. P. E. West, South Walnut street, had a thrilling experience with a runaway horse Friday morning. The horse was attached to a buggy and, getting the bit between his teeth, started on a wild run near the Model laundry on South Main street towards the court house. He was kept by the boy driver pretty well in the middle of the street until he got to the court house, when he veered to the left and was stopped by a crowd of men. No damage was done to horse, buggy or driver.

Tomorrow's Concert.

The Barnard Orchestra will give a sacred concert in the Chautauqua tent Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Leo-

THE THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION OF THE NEW YORK WORLD

Practically a Daily at the price of a Weekly.

No Other Newspaper in the World Gives So Much at So Low a Price.

This is a time of great events and you will want the news accurately and promptly. The Democrats, for the first time in sixteen years, will have the Presidency and they will also control both branches of Congress. The political news is sure to be of the most absorbing interest.

There is a great war in the Old World, and you may read of the extinction of the vast Turkish Empire in Europe, just as a few years ago you read how Spain lost her last foot of soil in America, after having ruled the empire of half the New World.

The World long since established a record for impartiality, and anybody can afford its Thrice-a-Week edition, which comes every other day in the week, except Sunday. It will be of particular value to you now. The Thrice-a-Week World also abounds in other strong features, serial stories, humor, markets, cartoons; in fact, everything that is to be found in a first class daily.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and the Hopkinsville Kentuckian together for one year for $2.65.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $3.00.

We are prepared to do all kinds of high-grade job printing. Try us.

She Broke Down Entirely.

Lantz, W. Va.—Mrs. Tebe Talbot, of this place, says: "I had been troubled with womanly ailments for some time, and at last I broke down entirely. I got so weak I could scarcely walk across the room. Thanks to Cardui, I improved right off. Now I do my housework, and am feeling well." During the past 50 years more than a million women have been benefited by taking Cardui. You must believe that Cardui will help you, too, since it helped all these others. Cardui is a safe, harmless, vegetable remedy, of positive, curative merit, for women. All drug stores. Try one bottle. It will surely help you.

Commissoner's Sale.

Christian Circuit Court, Kentucky. Jno. D. Clardy and others, Trustees, etc., Plaintiffs, Against Mrs. Hetty Long and others, Defendants.

BY VIRTUE of a Judgment and Order of Sale of the Christian Circuit Court, rendered at the June Term thereof, 1913, in the above cause, I shall proceed to offer for sale, at the Court-house door in Hopkinsville, Ky., to the highest and best bidder, at PUBLIC AUCTION, on Monday, the 7th day of July, 1913, between the hours of 11 A. M. and 2 P. M. (being County Court day,) upon a credit of six months, the following described property, to-wit:

A certain tract or parcel of land, containing 213 acres, composed of five adjoining parcels, situated in the Northern portion of Christian county, Kentucky, on the West side of the L. & N. Railroad, at Kelly, Ky., and being the same upon which Jesse P. Ford lived, at the time of his death, and bounded, as a whole, as follows, viz:—

Beginning at a stone (marked "A" on Plat) standing on the North side of a road, corner to a lot, sold to Joe Richardson by Mrs. L. J. Fortner; running, thence, with said road, S. 37 W. 230 poles to an Ash and Hickory, on a drain, in the original Armstrong line; thence, with said line, N. 41 W. 91 poles to a Black Oak stump, in said line, about 8 poles North West from a spring, corner to the Cynthia J. Fuller land; thence, with a line of same, passing a corner of it, and the P. A. Knight land, and crossing the Kelly & Mount Zear road, at about 75 poles, N. 2 E. full distance, 150 poles to a stake, in a line of the George Fuller land, now owned by John H. Boyd; thence, with a line thereof, S. 53 E. 56 1/2 poles to a poplar stump, on the South side of the Kelly & Mount Zear road; thence with said road, N. 37 E. 84 7/8 poles to a Mulberry, on North side of said road; thence, again, with said road, N. 64 E. 91 poles to a stake, in said road, corner to the Underwood lot; thence, with a line of same, and center of said road, N. 71 E. passing a corner of said Underwood lot, and corner of what is known as the Shop lot, and which was the property of J. P. Ford, at the time of his death, at 9.2 poles, course continued, in all, 18 poles to a stake, in a line of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company's property; thence, with said line, S. 16 E. 16.2 poles to a stake, corner to Mrs. L. J. Fortner's property; thence, with her line, S. 71 W. 6.6 poles to a stake, her corner; thence, with another of her lines, S. 62 W. 37 poles to a hickory, on the West side of a branch, another of her corners; thence, with another of her lines, S. 25 E. 91 poles to the beginning; and containing 213 acres.

Also, an adjoining lot, containing 1/2 of an acre, and bounded as follows: Beginning at a stake, in a line of the L. & N. Railroad Co's property, S. E. corner to Woodburn's lot, thence with Woodburn's line, S. 71 W. 8.8 poles to the N. E. corner of the Underwood lot; thence, with a line of same, S. 16 E. 6.8 poles to a stake, in the Mt. Zear & Kelly road; thence, with said road, N. 71 E. 8.8 poles to a line of the aforesaid railroad company's property; thence, with said line, N. 16 W. 6.8 poles to the beginning; and containing 1/2 of an acre.

Said 213 acres is to be sold in two parcels, and as a whole, and the bid, or bids, accepted, which yield the most money.

For the purchase price, the purchaser must execute bond, with approved surety, or sureties, bearing legal interest from the day of sale until paid, and having the force and effect of a Replevin Bond. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms.

HAVE GOOD CLAIM TO NAME

Kew Gardens in England Have Long Been Celebrated as Among the World's Finest.

The pre-eminence of Kew gardens in the botanical world dates from 1773. In the preceding year George III. was induced to send one of the gardeners to the Cape of Good Hope, providing his expenses do not exceed $1,000 a year, and he brought back 400 species of new plants. This collection being entirely new to Europe, placed the gardens at Kew above all those on the continent. Similar expeditions were sent out at the expense of the government to India, China, Brazil, Fiji, Australia and the Philippines. Before the close of the eighteenth century Kew gardens were generally admitted to possess the finest variety of plants in Europe. Till then this distinction was claimed both by the Paris Jardin des Plantes and the Upsala Botanic gardens.

Kew gardens had one sight a century ago which cannot be paralleled in modern London. Sir Richard Phillips, after a visit in 1816, tells how, "as I quitted the lane, I beheld on my left the long boundary wall of Kew gardens; on which a disabled sailor had drawn in chalk the effigies of the whole British navy, and over each representation appears the name of the vessel and the number of her guns. He has in this way depicted about 800 vessels each five or six feet long, and extending, with intervening distances above a mile and a half. As the labor of one man, the whole is an extraordinary performance, and I am told the decrepit draughtsman receives a competency from passing travelers."—London Chronicle.

AND THEY SIT IN JUDGMENT

Critics, if They Did But Know It, Do Not Always Cover Themselves With Glory.

The average critic who sits in judgment and catalogues faults and frailties of those who come his way is about as well equipped for the position as a woman who was overheard talking to another at a table in a downtown refectory last week. A third woman had just left the two rather hurriedly, excusing herself to keep an appointment, and as she took her leave she laughingly remarked to one of the others:

"Since you are dieting, Mary, I shan't ask you over to luncheon, so just come over some day soon and watch mother and me eat."

When she was out of hearing the stout woman whose dieting had been the cause of the old invitation said with an air of pity:

"What a shame it is she has so little culture. She has a perfect genius for sewing, but she certainly isn't on speaking terms with the English grammar. Did you hear her say 'Watch mother and me eat'?"

And the other woman shook her head vaguely at the thought of such an impossible error, for neither of them knew how to analyze a sentence.—Kansas City Star.

AFTER HIS SACRIFICE.

"I gave up smoking to please her."

"Good."

"And drinking?"

"Well?"

"Now she says she finds me very uninteresting."

GRATUITOUS ADVICE.

"There are a great many people in this world who don't know what's good for them."

"That's true, but if they will only wait a while somebody will come along and tell them what's good for them."

THE HABIT.

"The fellow fixing your lawn is a regular grafter."

"I know it. He even gets a rake-off on the dead leaves."

A LAMENT.

First Actor—It is a great pity.

Second Ditto—What is?

First Actor—That we can't eat our roasts.

TIME TO TREMBLE.

"Are there any degrees of love?"

"Oh, yes. Love's 'third degree' is an irate wife on the stairs with a broom in her hand, just waiting."

THE REASON OF IT.

"The German baron let a few remarks only fall."

"Perhaps that was on account of his broken English."

Certain Old School Books.

The state board urges that all old school books be sterilized and tells how it can be done to the damage of the bacteria, but not to the books. We suppose it is right. It is better that children live healthfully than that so time honored an institution as the combination school book and towel survive.—Toledo Blade.

BATTER FOR LITTLE CAKES

Really the Best of All Forms of This Preparation for Home-Made Delicacies.

The following recipe for cake batter can be used with good results in little cakes: Cream half a cupful of butter with a cupful of sugar. Add the yolks of two eggs and beat. Gradually add half a cupful of flour, sifted with two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Lastly add the beaten whites of the eggs.

When the batter is mixed divide it into four parts. To one part add chopped nut meats, to another a dash each of cinnamon, grated nutmeg and allspice, to another orange extract and half a teaspoonful of grated orange rind and to the fourth part half a teaspoonful of vanilla.

When the cakes are baked, cut and cool frost them. Prepare a stiff icing of the whites of raw eggs beaten stiff and confectioners' sugar. Beat the icing until it is creamy and smooth. Flavor it with a little vanilla and frost the nut cakes and the spice cakes. In the center of each nut cake place a nut meat or a candied cherry.
Place small strips of citron on the spice cakes, in designs, if desired. To some of the white frosting add a beaten egg yolk and a drop or two of orange extract, with a little more sugar, and with this frost the orange cakes. A little candied orange peel can be used to decorate these cakes.
Melt grated chocolate with con-fectioners' sugar, beat it carefully into the remaining white frosting and ice the plain cakes.

LEAVING MUCH TO CHANCE

Old-Time Cooking Directions Were Not Very Specific as to Portions to Be Mixed.

The modern housewife, who ap-portions her foods and mixes cakes and cooking recipes with mathematical precision, can find nothing more amusing than some of the vague directions by which the old-fashioned cook of several generations ago prepared foods. These random sentences, taken from a little cook book that belonged to the great-grandmother of a Baltimore girl, suggest pointed examples:

Take whatever quantity of rice you think proper, according to the size of your family; boil it in good broth and some lard; when cool mix it with as much flour as rice, a good deal of butter, some eggs to hold it together, and make a puff paste of it.
Form into hot cakes of whatever shape and bigness you please, and bake.

If your fire is not very quick and clear when the poultry is laid down to roast, it will not eat near so sweet or look so beautiful to the eye.

According to the goodness of your fire, your meat will be done sooner or later.

A few eggs, a little milk, a pinch of salt, sweetening to taste, flour to thicken, a good beating, and bake according to judgment. (These are directions for a breakfast bread.)

Jellied Cucumber Salad.

Three cups cucumbers cut into small blocks, 1 cup white wine vinegar, 1 ounce gelatin, 1 large bay leaf, 2 teaspoonfuls salt, 1 teaspoonful pepper-corns, 2 blades mace, mynnonnalee dressing. Soak the gelatin in ½ a cup of cold water for half an hour.
Put the bay leaf, pepper-corns and mace into a saucepan, add 2 cups of boiling water, cover the pan, simmer for 15 minutes, strain and measure the liquid. If there is not a cupful and a half, add sufficient water to make that amount. Turn in the gelatin, stir until dissolved and add the vinegar. Stand away until cold, but not stiffened. Arrange the blocks of cucumber (which should be free from seeds) in small molds and pour over them enough of the gelatin preparation to cover well. Put in the refrigerator to stiffen and serve.

Snow Pudding.

Three tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, moisten with a little cold water, and stir into pint of boiling water. Put one-half cup of sugar into water, also little salt. Cook and remove from stove, stir in whites of three eggs beaten to a stiff foam. Set away to cool. Serve with this custard: To a pint of boiling or hot milk add the three yolks well beaten, teaspoonful cornstarch and one-half cup sugar, stir and put away to cool. If you want something truly delicious, try this.

Fried Brains and Sour Sauce.

Clean and wash in cold water two sets of calves' brains, handling carefully to prevent breaking. Fry in butter until light brown and remove to serving dish.

Sauce—Place one teaspoon butter in a very hot pan and pour in slowly half a cup boiling water, adding parsley and garlic chopped fine. Let boil a few minutes and then pour in enough vinegar to give sour taste.
Pour over brains and garnish with parsley and thin slices of lemon.

Tomato Soup.

One quart can tomatoes, one pint of hot water will be needed. Let come to a boil; melt one tablespoonful of butter, blend with two tablespoonfuls of flour, stir into boiling mixture, add seasoning. Boil for ten minutes and run through sieve.

Pork Chops With Apples.

Place the chops and slices of tart apples in a frying pan with a little hot fat, unless the pork is fat. Salt (and pepper if you like it), and fry brown both chops and apples.

A Splendid Tonic.

Cora, Ky.—Mrs. Iva Moore, of this place, says: "I was so weak, I could hardly walk. I tried Cardui, and was greatly relieved. It is a splendid tonic. I have recommended Cardui to many friends, who tried it with good results." Testimony like this comes unsolicited from thousands of earnest women, who have been benefited by the timely use of that successful tonic medicine, Cardui. Purely vegetable, mild, but reliable, Cardui well merits its high place in the esteem of those who have tried it. It relieves women's pains, and strengthens weak women.
It is certainly worth a trial. Your druggist sells Cardui.

FOR THE AFTERNOON TEA

Delicious and Somewhat Uncommon Biscuits Are Those With Flavor of Walnuts.

Walnut Biscuits—Delicious and uncommon biscuits for afternoon tea may be made from the following recipe:

One pound of flour, four ounces of butter, the same quantity of sugar, one egg, and three ounces of finely-chopped walnuts.

Beat butter and sugar together, adding the egg, thoroughly whisked. Stir in the flour very gradually, working it into the other ingredients till all becomes a smooth yellow paste. Turn on to a floured board and knead in the walnuts with the fingers.

Roll out, cut into shapes with a fancy cutter, and make in a slow oven for half an hour.

Walnut Roll—Shell and skin four ounces of walnuts and chop very small, place one pound of icing sugar in a bowl, adding part of the white of one egg and a dessertspoonful of water. Stir vigorously, add part of the nuts, then more egg, proceeding in this manner till all the nuts are added.

Mix in five drops of almond flavoring, and turn the mixture onto a sug-ared board. Knead with the fingers and shape into a roll. Put away for several hours in a cool place till thoroughly set, then cut in slices and arrange on fancy dishes.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Spareribs should be parboiled before roasting.

Creamed cauliflower, served in green shells, is a pretty and tempting dish.

It is best to roast or pan chicken with the breast down. It will be more juicy.

For 15 cents you can buy a little device designed for sprinkling clothes evenly.

If a bag of sulphur is kept in the bird cage it will drive away lice in hot weather.

Left-over jelly of several different kinds mixed together can be used for cake filling.

Do not put salt in the water in which peas are cooked. It will cause the skins to crack.

When rubber gloves wear into holes try mending them with surgical adhesive plaster.

Try adding a leaf of splanach to water in which peas are cooked; they will keep a good color.

Rub brown sugar on a sliced ham before boiling it. The ham will have a delicious flavor.

Maryland Fried Chicken.

Have the chickens dressed and on ice for at least twelve hours before cooking them. Dust each piece with salt and pepper and flour well. Have an iron frying pan half full of lard and smoking hot; then put in the chicken, cover and let cook for half an hour, turning from time to time.
When tender, and a rich crisp brown, pour the fat from the pan and add a large tablespoonful of butter and let brown; then stir in a tablespoonful of flour and stir smooth. Pour in a cupful of rich milk or thin cream and stir and cook until you have a smooth, creamy sauce. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Arrange the chicken on a heated platter with fried strips of cornmeal mush around it; add a little curly parsley, and serve the sauce in a separate dish.

Washington Pie.

One-quarter cup butter, one cup sugar, two eggs, one-half cup milk, one and one-half cups sifted flour, one rounding teaspoon of baking powder.
The way in which this is put together is a little unusual, but if you can follow the directions I think you will be pleased with the result. Cream the butter and sugar by hand, add the eggs one at a time and slap them in by hand. Then use a spoon and add milk and most of the flour and beat well. Add the baking powder sifted with a little of the flour, and do not beat much after adding it. This makes a fine-grained, light cake.

Rhubarb Wine.

Put the stalks through a meat chopper. Measure five pounds and add a gallon of cold water, a half-ounce of gelatin, and the grated rind of a lemon. Let stand three days and then add three pounds of sugar. Let it ferment as long as it will, filling up for evaporation. Bottle and seal.— Suburban Life.

Flavoring Bouquet.

A kitchen bouquet for flavoring soups can easily be made. Take a few sprigs of parsley and wrap them around pepper corns, whole cloves, a bay leaf and other herbs that are at hand. Tie up tightly. This can be removed from the soup without trouble.

Apple Custard Pie.

Peel sour apples, stew until soft and not much water left and rub through a colander. Beat three eggs for each pie to be baked and put in at the rate of one cup butter and one cup sugar for three pies, season with nutmeg and bake as pumpkin pies.

Chocolate Raisins.

Seeded raisins dipped in melted sweet chocolate are very nice. If you wish to do a candy stunt get the big table raisins and seed them carefully without breaking them off the stem.
Then dip each one in the chocolate.

The Moguls finished a series of three games with Clarksville at Clarksville yesterday. The two teams are here today for a game this afternoon on the local diamond. The second game of the series here has been transferred to Nashville and the two clubs will play here again Monday. This will be the first appearance on the local grounds of the Clarksville team this season and very large crowds are expected to witness the contest, both this afternoon and Monday. The games will be called at the usual hour, 3:30. Paducah will be here Tuesday for three games, followed by Cairo Friday and Saturday.

WALLER & TRICE.

Bob Taylor Lives,

In the two bright and beautiful books just issued, "Lectures and Best Literary Productions," and "Life and Career" of Senator Robert Love Taylor, handsomely illustrated, you cannot hear again his voice or see the humorous curl of his lips, that convulsed a continent with laughter, but, within the covers of these volumes, are the pictures woven of his wondrous words, and, laughing through their sunny pages, are all of the inimitable stories which he told to the multitudes. In "Life and Career," pens of genius have traced his romantic life from its morning in "Happy Valley," through his young and roseate dreams through stress and storm, through cheering throngs, and on into the waiting shadows, loved and laurel crowned.

We expect to sell millions of these books. First edition going fast.
